

Working and Waiting

Written by Larry Robertson

Working and Waiting

I know of nothing quite so beautiful than to see an aged old Christian come to the end of life's way with an unwavering confidence in God. The constantly lengthening, deepening shadows of "life's evening" gather round about them, but they aren't afraid for they know that the darkness and gloom of the tomb shall disappear with the dawning and arising of that eternal and glorious day. In my preaching they have always been an inspiration to me; and they shall be. I trust I may face the end in such a fashion. I guess this is why the following caught my eye.
—Larry Robertson